Dumping and Antidumping Trade Protection

Series no. 356 The International Library of Critical Writings in Economics series

Edited by Bruce A. Blonigen, Philip H. Knight Professor of Social Science and Dean for Faculty and Operations, College of Arts and Sciences, University of Oregon and Thomas J. Prusa, Professor and Chair, Department of Economics, Rutgers, The State University of New Jersey, New Brunswick, US

Antidumping trade protection is one of the most frequent and ubiquitous trade policies in the global economy. This volume brings together the key reference pieces in the antidumping literature that have critically defined and shaped what we know about this important and unique form of trade protection. An introductory chapter by the editors, both scholars in this area, critically analyzes the literature and discusses its future directions. This is an important reference volume not only for new and established scholars in international economics, but also policymakers and legal intellectuals.

‘Nothing comes closer to “everything you wanted to know about antidumping” than this volume. This is a great collection of well-known, thought-provoking papers that have influenced our thinking about antidumping, and antidumping practice alike. Academics and practitioners now have a magnificent one-stop shop to be inspired from.’
